

child crisis center

Boeing Steps Up in a Time of Need

June 10, 2009

In response to vast cuts in funding due to the Arizona State budget deficit this year, The Boeing Company Charitable Trust recently made two grants to the Child Crisis Center totaling $20,000. One $10,000 grant will provide critical funds to help the Child Crisis Center continue to provide emergency shelter to abused children ages 0-11 years old. The other $10,000 grant will help the Child Crisis Center and its Family Resource Center program provide free educational classes to new parents and pre-school aged children.

The Boeing Company and The Boeing Company Charitable Trust are long-time, generous funders of the Child Crisis Center's programs. Over the years, they have helped to ensure that thousands of children have a safe place to heal and grow at the Child Crisis Center. Thousands of families have also benefitted from support groups, parenting skills classes and children's self-development classes offered at the Family Resource Center and partially funded by The Boeing Company and The Boeing Company Charitable Trust.